I KNEW I WAS IN A NEW SCHOOL WHEN . . .

My room (?) - wasn't.

We had to start work on August 18th.

I didn't have to teach classes in hallways. (The whole school was an open hallway.).

When I walked into a space in July, someone pointed to a mound of dirt near a giant thing spewing flames and said, "That is your area."

Center: Mr. Crandall, Housemaster.

. . . last August I found myself moving chairs and desks from one end of the building to the other.

. . . I started teaching without books.

. . . wherever I went there weren't any locked doors.

. . . I leaned against the wall and found that my new green sports coat had suddenly developed blue paint blotches.

. . . I was faced with an executive decision of gravest importance: "Eeny, meany, miney, moe! Into which (unmarked) restroom should I go."

- . . . the tables in my room had no chairs.
- . . . the tables in MY room had no legs.
- . . . teachers as well as students were walking around with maps of the school.
- . . . the janitor sold admission tickets and asked me to take off my shoes.
- . . . I was sent to the office for being out of my class without a pass.
- . . . In the beginning the kids in my T. A. separated into groups according to where they had gone to school last year.
- . . . I looked at the library shelves and saw how empty they looked.
- . . . Phys. Ed. classes trooped by my window to the parking lots because the fields weren't ready yet.

- . . . I tried to find a stapler and no one had one.
- . . . a student actually smiled when I walked in.
- . . . the supplies I ordered arrived three months after school started.
- . . . after the first day I wanted a wall to lean on, but there wasn't one.
- . . . there was air conditioning and carpeting.
- . . . I had to have a tree painted on my glass wall to get some privacy.
- . . . we ran out of paper supplies in the bathrooms the first day.
- . . . students looked as bewildered as I felt.

New York . . .

This year's trip to New York was open to anyone in the Upper House. The day included tours of the three major concert halls in Lincoln Center: Avery Fisher Hall, The Metropolitan Opera

House, and The New York State Theatre. After lunch and a stroll down Broadway, the culmination of the day was a performance of THE THREE PENNY OPERA in The Vivian Beaumont Theatre.
